This morning I transferred 305 shares of common stock of the Atlantic Refining Company to American Friends of Versailles, Inc., as a contribution toward repairing the inside staircase of the Petit Trianon, which is badly in need of attention. This represents about $10,000.

I have, thus far this year, transferred securities to the amount of about $88,000 to Avalon Foundation under the arrangement I made years ago with Ailsa.

McKittrick, with whom I had once been associated with W. A. Harriman and Co., came to call on me. He drank heavily for about ten years, but became straightened out by Alcoholics Anonymous and seems in good health. He was a [redacted] capable man, but his habits ruined his banking career. He now has a Government job in connection with refugee problems. He is a brother of Tom McKittrick, and should progress satisfactorily in the Civil Service.

I had another sitting with Leonor Fini this afternoon and was much taken by her agreeable conversation.
